

A woman in a patterned sari and headscarf wades through murky floodwaters. She carries a dead chicken under her left arm and a large plastic bottle in her right hand. A sack of belongings is slung over her shoulder. In the background, a thatched-roof hut and trees are partially submerged. The sky is overcast.

Climate change impact in Bangladesh

Salt in the wound

By Mohiuddin Babar

CSR consultant &
Convenor- Nature Alliance

Demographic explosion

Resource exploitation limitations

Economic constraints

Weak enforcement of regulations

Climate change impacts salt in the wound

Private sector

More engaged with exclusionary projects

NGOs

- Economic empowerment
- Reducing inequality

Business

- Provide products & services
  - Create jobs
- Generate income & investment
- Community engagement (CSR)

The changed scenario

In the past :

Business worked on self interest – to make profit

Today :

Business has to work Responsibly

- to be ethical in management & production
- to be caring for the environment & resource use
- to respect human rights including workers rights
- to care for the community in which it works

Vulnerable areas

☛ Textile sector   ☛ Brick kilns   ☛ Shrimp cultivation end of the pipe solution X

Solution at source **✓

Thank you

For further contacts :

email :

mohiuddin.babar@naturealliancebd.org
babar.mohiuddin@gmail.com